Queensland Government announced as Major sponsor for IAHA 2015 HealthFusion Team Challenge

The excitement continues to build for the IAHA 2015 HealthFusion Team Challenge (HFTC), with the recent announcement of the Queensland Government as a major sponsor for this important Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander health workforce development and student support initiative.

“We are pleased to welcome the Queensland Government as a major sponsor of the Indigenous Allied Health Australia 2015 HealthFusion Team Challenge (HFTC),” said Ms Donna Murray, IAHA Chief Executive Officer. “This demonstrates a strong commitment to supporting the future Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander health workforce.”

The HFTC is a unique learning experience that provides an excellent opportunity for health students from a wide range of disciplines to work collaboratively in client care and provides students valuable insight into the realities of working in a complex healthcare environment, and how working with their fellow health practitioners can achieve the best outcomes for their clients.

Each interprofessional team of students is given the same complex case study and must work together over two days to problem solve and prepare a management plan to get their patient back on track. The teams then present their plan to panel of expert judges and the two teams that demonstrate a mastery of teamwork and communication in the heats then go on to the Finals to compete in a Final Showdown in front of a live audience at the IAHA 2015 National Conference.

The IAHA 2015 HFTC will be held 28-29 November 2015, just prior to the IAHA 2015 National Conference in Cairns, Queensland on 1-2 December 2015.
